Who is the greatest leader of all time?

Consider Charlemagne's dynasty. Napoleon's brilliance. Hitler's tenacity. Queen Elizabeth's patience. General Lee's sympathy. Mehmed's drive.

No.

It's George W. Bush.

Now, you may be thinking: wasn't he kind of retarded?

And the answer is yes—a total moron. At least, that's the portrait we've inherited. But perhaps he never wanted to lead. Perhaps all he wanted was to play golf and muse about.

We portray him as a gullible idiot, duped by Cheney. But perhaps the uglier possibility is that Bush understood perfectly well—and let that scheming eunuch take power because he simply couldn't be bothered.

A million dead Iraqis and war crimes? Fine.

An economy collapsing under a housing bubble? Fine.

Warrantless surveillance and spying on Americans? Fine.

Just let me play golf.

I really like this mentality. I am not your boss. I am not your therapist. I am not here to settle petty squabbles, pass judgment, or hold court.

My ideal day involves a beach, a hat pulled over my face, and some pretty girls dancing to shitty EDM.

Not dealing with this.

But let's get into it.

First, some background. I used to be a privacy developer. I spent thousands of hours building things on the blockchain that felt like literal magic. The project failed. Everything I learned stayed with me.

So let me be fucking clear: I expect basic respect. If you have a problem with me, address it with me directly.

As for the camera surveillance company, my position is simple: distance yourself from it. Sell your stake. Donate the proceeds to humanitarian relief in Gaza. If the investment was an honest mistake, say so plainly—and explain what you are doing to correct it.

Furthermore, you are not my counselor. You have no authority over me, and you do not have my permission to access or read any further letters. After October 20, do not use my name or involve yourself in my affairs. Respect that boundary.

As for the Mace, you are talking far too much. You supposedly awaited my presence, yet a few weeks ago, you made remarks I understood as threats. That damaged my trust in you.

I intend to meet the Elder first.

If the question of a certain privacy developer returning to the country arises, I want your support. Whether you give it is your decision. State your position plainly.

If we are to have any further dealings, threats and intimidation are unacceptable.

I ask every council member to call the Elder over the next two days. Pay your respects. Even five minutes would be welcome; I believe he may be lonely.

I hope to care for him over the next two months, ahead of our first council meeting in December—somewhere that belongs to Jupiter.

Until I meet with the Elder, I am once again declaring an emergency and appointing Chair 6 as interim secretary and director.

“Now watch this drive.”
